Since the domestic refined oil price adjustment on March 9, international crude oil prices have risen sharply due to the escalating conflict between the US, Israel, and Iran, with prices in the Middle East reaching record highs. To mitigate the impact of the abnormal rise in international oil prices, reduce the burden on downstream users, and ensure stable economic operation and social welfare, temporary control measures have been implemented on domestic refined oil prices while maintaining the existing price mechanism framework.

According to the current pricing mechanism, the domestic gasoline and diesel prices (standard grades) should have been increased by 2,205 yuan and 2,120 yuan per ton respectively on March 23. After the adjustment, the actual increase was 1,160 yuan and 1,115 yuan respectively.

The National Development and Reform Commission will guide refined oil production and sales enterprises to do their utmost to organize and transport refined oil production to ensure market supply. It will also cooperate with relevant departments to strengthen market supervision and inspection, severely punish illegal and irregular activities such as failure to comply with national price policies, and effectively maintain market order and protect consumer interests.
